HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, - Aug. 21, 1891.

Morgan and Breathitt will each have five votes in Democratic conventions hereafter, and instead of four, Wolfe drops to two.

That Georgia "business agent" who got away with $50,000 belonging to the State Alliance, had an eye to the main chance, and might soon have been a full-fledged monopolist.

The final test of the Government rainfall expedition was advertised to take place Sunday at Midland, Texas, and in proof that it was a success, it rained here in Hazel Green that day.

While the Georgia Legislature was recently wrestling with the prohibition problem, a full grown tiger, a "blind" one, alive and kicking, was discovered in the capitol building at Atlanta.

The death of George Jones, editor of the New York Times, removes from New York journalism all save one of the old time leaders. We Dana knew the survivor, unless it be the mugwump of the Sun.

The outside world may be in ignorance of the fact, but all the same there is a body of 700 acres of land in this county, very rich in all of the finest quality, and it lies within four miles of the K. U. railroad.

Mrs. Sophia Litterer, of Louisville, has sued the Pioneer Worsted Company of that city for $25,000 damages, alleging that her arm was wasted to that extent by being caught in a cog-wheel of the defendant's machinery.

A celestial conundrum faces the World's Fair commissioners. China has been invited to take part in the exposition, and like Barkia, is willing, but the Chinese exclusion law prohibits that people from entering this country.

A case of mistaken identity: The Lexington Transcript copied an editorial paragraph from THE HERALD of the 7th inst. and gave credit to the Jackson Hustler. What's the matter with our old friend Polk? Been mixing drinks?

The Republican National committee, now that Blocks-of-five Dudley has made his exit, might secure Mortimer, the manager of the National Loan Association at Chicago. He would prove a powerful adjunct in raising campaign funds for 1892.

The official plurality of Hon. John Young Brown over his Republican opponent, Major A. T. Wood, is not far from 27,885. Estimating the vote of Floyd, Elliott and Knott the same as cast in 1887, the total vote of the State will be as follows: Brown, 144,089; Wood, 116,204; Erwin, 25,046; Harris, 4233. Total, 289,570. The total vote is 23,588 more than was cast for Treasurer in 1889, 54,916 less than was cast for President in 1888, and 11,083 more than was cast for Governor in 1887. Mr. Brown's vote is 800 or 900 more than that given for Buckner in 1887, but it is 39,718 less than the vote for Cleveland. The Republican vote for Maj. Wood is 38,930 less than that given to Mr. Harrison and 10,669 less than that drawn out by Mr. Bradley in 1887. The Peoples party got 70 per cent. of its strength from Republican ranks, and as an ally to aid the latter in defeating the Democratic party, was therefore a complete failure.

Consumption Cured.
An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 320 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Keel Evolutions.
Come listen now, ye renegades,
While I proclaim your doom,
The g. o. p. has used your aids
To check Democratic boom.
I knew you'd catch the party ail,
And said within my heart,
What can a party but fail,
With such a dismal start?
Some denunciations from other States,
With others from Kentucky,
Would cry out "rand" in long debates,
Till some thought they were plucky.
One told us he was flesh and blood,
As though we might mistake
Him for a god that chewed his cud
And come to rule our State.
Third party "likes," how do you feel?
For mustering up the seap-goats
You have no patriotic zeal,
And lost your grip and votes.
Such men as you who office seek,
And public favor lack,
Who talk so loud and run so weak,
You now stay off the track.
I'd crawl off now and try to die,
Unless I could forget
That I had worked through wet and dry
For the meanest party yet.
I know you claim they will not steal,
Like the two old parties do,
But now you see how the people squeal
At the thought of raking you.
You are a chip from the two old blocks,
Or rather the refuse,
Fraud divided in two flocks,
You have combined to use.

Republicans and renegades,
Kentucky's not for you,
You bear the cluster of our spades,
Here's what we're going to do.
Go dig a grave both deep and wide,
And roll them up in crape,
And put them in it side by side,
Be sure that none escape.
All Democrats, rejoice with us,
And all your strength renew,
Be not misled by party fuss,
Victory is ours in King's view.

David Ward and William Osborn had an old-fashioned club and fist fight a few days ago. Frank Ward also took part in the tussle. Killing was prevented, but the result is bruises, hard feelings and some court money.

Some of our merchants are somewhat staggered over postal cards received by last mail, postmarked at Chicago, without signature and read as follows: "Be wise while you live, for you'll be a long time dead."

D. W. Vest is visiting in Virginia. Today his wife returning from town and while helping her little boy off her horse let him fall, breaking his leg.

Heath Bartley, Cyrus Perry and J. F. Havens have bought a new threshing machine, which will be in soon.

Robert Woolery left yesterday for Harrison county, where his father is in a dying condition.

Died—On the 7th, infant child of J. S. Nickell. On the 8th, infant child of George Tackett.

Born, last week, to the wife of Noah Lovely, a boy. Name, Andy Thomas Pierat.

A. C. Nickell, Sr., is selling a patent fence right in this part of Morgan.

Lewis Hylton last week bought a horse of Noah Lovely for $125.

N. B. Mazer, of Mt. Sterling, is visiting in this locality.

August 11. BLURT.

Born, on the 17th, to the wife of "Zac" Dennis, a boy.

Mrs. F. M. Thomas, from St. Helena, is visiting in town.

George Combs, from Owsley county, was visiting here last week.

Elder D. C. Combs recently closed a meeting at the mouth of Lick Fork on Licking river with 62 additions.

Miss Clara Pierat has returned from a protracted visit at Mt. Sterling, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Jones, of that city, who after staying a few days in town left to visit relatives at Hazel Green.

The Burning Springs association of Regular Baptists was held at Mount Olivet, a few miles north of this place, beginning last Friday and closing Sunday. All their churches were well represented and large congregations each day.

A great many biblical scholars teach that the living in the "time of the end," and a close study of the "signs of the times," together with the prophetic statements concerning that day, will almost convince any one that such is the case. For instance, in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, sixth verse, the prophet says in that day children will lead lions about with perfect safety. We also read about Noah keeping lions in the ark during the flood, and as a fulfillment of the above prophecy, on last Thursday one of the Noahs under the control of Miss Betty Pierat, and being assisted by Willie Ward and Miss Cora Clark, was conducted to an altar at the residence of Miss Betty's father, C. C. Pierat, whereupon Rev. R. D. Biven, after the proper demonstrations, pronounced them the best of friends until death should separate them, and in a few years I expect a fulfillment of a part of the third verse of the eleventh chapter of Zachariah.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are authorized to announce GEORGE W. DRAKE as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce WEEDEN CONGLETON as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, subject to the action of the Democratic party. If elected, JOHN T. CENTER will be his deputy.

We are authorized to announce W. A. BYRD, of Tontona, as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, at the August election, 1892, subject to the voters of the county. Mr. Byrd says he is a Democrat, and expects to remain one; he does not believe in fraudulent means of securing county office, and if honored to the position of Sheriff will perform the duties regardless of person or party.

We are authorized to announce JONAS F. VANSANT, of Campton, as a candidate for Circuit Court Clerk of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party. Had 8 years experience as Deputy Clerk. Your support and influence respectfully solicited.

We are authorized to announce J. B. HOLLON, present County Clerk, as a candidate for Circuit Court Clerk of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party. Your support and influence is most respectfully solicited.

Get ready and go to Lexington next Thursday. Only cost you $1 there and back.

Married, on Sunday morning, James Gilley and Miss Mary Belle Ross, Rev. Isaac E. Murphy officiating.

Mrs. Louisa Wilson, Green Butler, Troy Pieratt and Lou Tyler each have our thanks for a bountiful supply of fine tomatoes.

Married, Friday, the 14th inst., Capt. C. C. Cope, of Breathitt, and Mrs. Taylor, of Dayborough, Rev. J. T. Pieratt officiating.

Miss Inez Lusk gave birthday party Wednesday night of last week, and all the young folks of town were invited and had an enjoyable time.

In the primary election for Sept. 5th all who voted the Democratic ticket prior to August 3, and pledge their support to the nominees, will be entitled to vote.

Owing to a rush of matter we are compelled to leave out some correspondence and several communications, but we hope soon to be able to accommodate all comers.

Mrs. John Davis, of Mariba, Tuesday sent our better-five of the finest tomatoes we have seen this season, for which she has our thanks. The five weighed 5 1/2 pounds.

A look at the announcements in this paper will show that J. T. Center is running as the deputy of J. W. Congleton for Sheriff of Wolfe County. Mr. Center is quite popular, and what figure this move will cut in the race remains to be seen.

See the excursion advertisement on this page. Jackson to Lexington and return only $1.50. The fare from Tontona to Lexington and return is only $1, and everybody in Wolfe county ought to go. You will never have another such opportunity.

Everybody in Eastern Kentucky ought to bear in mind that the Hazel Green Fair will be held Sept. 29 and 30 and Oct. 1 and 2, and prepare their exhibits for the same. The premium list is a very liberal one, and there is a chance for most everybody to draw a prize.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary press badge to the Winchester Fair, Sept. 8 to 12, inclusive, and one of its handsome catalogues. This is one of the best fairs in the bluegrass circuit, and we advise all who wish to attend "a fair as is a fair," to visit Winchester on the dates named.

In crossing a bridge which spans a ditch in a field belonging to J. T. Day, Miss Rosa Trimble and a daughter of Calvin Swauger, near town, came near losing their lives on Wednesday of last week. In rearing the horse back to open a gate, the animal lapped off the bridge into the ditch, but fortunately the young ladies slipped off before the horse fell. The horse fell backwards, and a crowd had to be summoned from town to extricate it from its perilous position.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Julia Cecil, of Cedar Bluff, Va., and Mr. Wm. H. John, which will take place next Wednesday at the home of the bride's father, R. F. Cecil. The HERALD extends congratulations and assures Miss Julia that her many friends here unite in wishing her much joy.

NOTICE.—The Board of Trustees of every school district in Wolfe County is hereby invited to be present at Wolfe County Teachers' Institute on Friday, August 28, 1891, at 10:30 A. M., at which hour is set apart for them and an exposition of the school law. Respectfully,
H. N. HORTON, Co. Supt.

Are you going? Where? Why to Lexington on the excursion next Thursday. Such an opportunity will never offer again, and we advise all to avail of the present opportunity. The fare from Tontona to Lexington and return is only $1.00, and everybody ought to go.

We have received a complimentary ticket to the Beattyville Fair, which is to be held Sept. 2, 3 and 4, and return thanks for the same. This will be the first fair ever held at Beattyville, but the officers and managers are wide awake and promise a first-class exhibition.

Dr. E. O. Guerrant began a meeting at the Presbyterian church in this place on Monday evening, and preached for us morning and evening, closing his meeting Wednesday night and leaving for Gillmore Thursday morning.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, insomniac interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrapment, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great centre. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is far preferable to any sedatives and narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and inevitably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that important organ, and their beneficial influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome influence is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use.

Maytown Missiles.

The Peoples party craft, Black Rover, owned by S. B. Erwin, started from this place on the 3rd of August, bound on a voyage up Salt river. Her crew was composed as follows: Jordan Wills, captain; Frank Williams, first mate; John M. Henry, second mate; Jackson Ratcliff, cook; C. W. Clark, secretary and treasurer of the expedition, and we suppose was well supplied with the necessities furnished by the owner of the craft. The captain wished to take Rev. W. W. Manker along as chaplain, but the Republicans of this place objected for the reason that Black Rover was going to a country entirely too hot to suit his constitution. They also objected to his going because of the fact that they will want and need him here in '92. The Black Rover's cargo consisted of the dead political bodies of the third party too numerous to mention. When everything was ready Rev. J. W. Kendrick asked the blessing of a kind Providence on the expedition. The Black Rover then cut her cable, raised her anchor, and with Samuel Bays standing on her stern with all his cane crying three cheers for our Kansas friends, and the Peoples party, she sailed away and passed forever out of sight.

WHAT HE THINKS—AN' DOES.

In the music of the mornin',
When there's vigor in the air,
An' a feller needs no warnin',
For his feller he's prepared;
When the sun has done its errand,
An' a feller's rain too,
Et es really quite surpris'n,
What a feller thinks he'll do.

Before breakfast, when a washin',
An' a wiper has an' face,
He jest thinks he'll do a washin',
Laf of work about the place;
Dig the weeds from out the laters,
Hoo the patch of beans an' corn,
Kill the signs of the trimmers,
Fore they show the dinner horn.

An' he thinks that after dinner
He will rake the clover hay,
He is such an agile dancer,
Edlin he's in his play.

An' then, if he should get through it,
Et es really think he'll do it,
T'won't take very long ter do it—
He will go ter town an' mill.

But the air gets rather sultry,
E'en before it's nine o'clock,
An' the sunshin' extra tryin',
Hot enough fer most a rock;
An' a feller with a good will,
An' the north of the corn;
An' he's in the shade a readin',
Fore it's noon, an' sun's a burn.

An' then, as he tries the rainin',
After dinner, of the hay,
Then he says: "Et's better makin',
Must go green ter take ter day."
An' he goes ter town an' mill,
Ter the wagon with a will,
An' a feller with a good will,
Of his goes ter town an' mill.

So, ye see, et ain't the thinkin',
That alone completes the work;
Et es really, thinkin' an' doin',
That alone makes the work.

WITHOUT A WORD.

A Very Natural Mistake with a Very Happy Ending.

(Written for This Paper.)

He had heard the news of the death of the great Edington Rawleigh, and had looked out of the window with a strange flutter at heart.

This western city was so close to his home. He had clutched some withered mistletoe—a good stranger in the seat behind him.

"What is that huge pile of buildings?" he now asked, as the locomotive screamed out its approach to all the echoes about the town.

"That's the deaf and dumb institute," the stranger responded. "Ah—you live in this place?"

"Yes, sir." "I expect to settle here—in the law," with a sudden youthful impulse to words of confidence. "Judge Chiloers is my father's friend. I shall be in his office."

"I know him well. Shall we walk up town together?" "Thank you—yes. I should like to stretch my muscles a little, and I am a guide."

The streets were bustling with busy people. More than one passer-by turned to look at the newcomer's elegant cosmopolitan figure.

"A stranger," was the verdict. "Eastern." Presently an exclamation burst from the young man's lips.

"They had just met and passed the judge's office, turned to get a second look at the pretty face."

Should he call her? She could not hear. Should he keep the token? The beat of gauze was fragrant with her touch.

He caught it in his hand, ran awkwardly after her, and thrust it before her face. She received it with another blush and a nod of thanks.

"What an adventure," he said to himself when he had collected his senses enough to have a coherent thought. "Deaf and dumb," he shuddered; "what an outrage upon nature—what a libel upon love!"

Half a dozen times that day and for a week afterwards he found himself recurring to the incident. "I must not think of it," he admonished himself. "However, how the whole thing haunts me!"

But while he scoured himself at remembering, and vowed he would forget, he set himself systematically to work to find out who she was and all about her.

"Miss Westlander—a teacher in the institute," was the result—"a niece of Westlander, the banker."

He had a letter to the Westlanders. He would present it at once. He would visit the institute—a natural thing for a stranger to do. He went out there the very day the thought occurred to him. He made the rounds of the building with the superintendent.

In passing one of the class rooms he at last saw the magnet that had brought him there. She had about her a group of children, but did not look up. He tried to attract her notice, but she did not heed.

He went away without even a glance from her eyes. But he was happy. A curious phase of his passion now set in. Although he visited her kindly, he found it impossible to ask even the simplest questions about her. It seemed like crying from the house-top that he was in love. And his pride was a little sore, that he had been ingloriously captured without a word and by a girl who could not utter a word.

As weeks went on he sank deeper and more hopelessly into the morass of his infatuation. He set to work to learn the sign language. He would do anything to meet her on her own ground.

One afternoon he started out for a stroll. He left the town walks and struck for the open country. He decided he would skirt the institute grounds, but did not look up. He tried to attract her notice, but she did not heed.

He had quite a good idea of the suburbs when, not far in a chance, he saw an object which for a moment seemed to turn him to stone in his tracks.

Upon a narrow, rustic stile leading to a field beyond stood a woman. Distress was in every line of her slim figure. With a violent plunge of his heart he saw it was Miss Westlander. At the sight of his approaching steps she quickly turned her face in his direction. She looked at him upon the verge of tears.

At the suggestion of the secret of her distress was revealed. A goat that was pretending to cross the track near by lifted his nostrils, scanned the newcomer respectfully and took several aggressive steps in his direction.

Rawleigh had a cane and was by no means intimidated. But as he advanced the goat lowered his horns and prepared to charge. This he did at once and with such directness and force that Rawleigh had no alternative but to dodge him, aim a wild blow at him and run.

The stile was the only refuge at hand. He reached it with commendable alertness. Two lower steps were missing and he scaled the rickety flight at a bound.

He found himself suddenly standing in Miss Westlander's side on that narrow space.

He did not speak, for of course she could not hear. Then both began to laugh. "Isn't it absurd?" he spelled slowly with his fingers.

"I have been here more than an hour," she answered rapidly with her fingers, pointing to the goat.

"Can't we sit down?" he asked in pantomime. There was just room, by sitting close together, for them to perch upon the top step. They adjusted themselves there as if to consider the situation.

Miss Westlander's distress disappeared into the keenest sense of the ridiculous. Her gray eyes brimmed with mirth.

"How long must we wait here?" pointing to their captor. "I don't care," with a dash of exultation he could not hide, and at which she blushed.

"Do you understand me readily?" was his next question. "I understand your little hand in the air," she said, expressive shrug of the shoulder, as if to say: "Only passably."

"I read you perfectly," he said, "but you do half the talking with your eyes." But why did she talk so fast? Her fingers flew, through letters and signs until he was bewildered.

"Hold on!" he cried, aloud. "Ah—we read from the lips sometimes—you said hold on."

"Yes," he spelled, clumsily, "pray to take breath."

But she would not. Letters, gestures, changes of expression, often interrogative, followed in a whirlwind.

"Oh, the witches are in you," he exclaimed. "I can't understand a word you say," with a despairing sign of not having caught her meaning.

She still went on. To counterbalance his chagrin he began a running fire of comments aloud with the intense satisfaction of knowing she could not hear.

"You little windmill. You talk me blind. If you belonged to me I should enjoy being scolded like that, because I should simply look away—like this," and he turned his head away.

There was no longer any reason why they should not escape. Rawleigh helped Miss Westlander down from her perch with a regretful sigh.

He walked to the gate of the institute grounds with her. He asked leave to call upon her. She hesitated—pleaded that she was busy—and did not seem to wish it.

He went home dazed and confused beyond anything he had ever known. From this day on, mere dreaming in Rawleigh's position was over. He left no means intact to be near Miss Westlander. But in one way or another he was nearly always thwarted.

Yet his opportunity came at last. One of the banker Westlander's daughters was to be married. It was to be a quiet wedding to which Rawleigh as a special friend of the groom was invited.

He was certain he should meet the lady of his heart there. He sent her a bunch of roses and asked her to wear them. He supplied himself with a tablet, so as to avoid hand speech, which might make them conspicuous in her fingers.

On entering the room he sought her side at once. She and the omnipresent brother were seated together. She wore his flowers. She greeted him with a bright smile.

He beckoned her to a window alcove, intimating he had something to impart. He took out the tablet and wrote hurriedly:

"As soon as the ceremony is over, please come here again. I must speak with you."

She wrote back: "Is anything wrong?"

"Yes," he wrote, unless I can see you alone for a moment."

"I will come."

There was no chance for further talk until the ceremony was over. Then Rawleigh managed to withdraw her once more to the retired corner.

She sank into a chair with a half-pathetic look of inquiry upon her face. "Am I never to be allowed to see you?" he wrote.

"Yes—I am here."

"But alone—in your own home. I love you madly!"

There was no answer to that. The tablet trembled in her fingers. He snatched it from her again.

"My first glance at you was fatal. I do not care that you are—deaf and dumb," he wrote, as if to make it as cruelly true as possible, he wrote: "Deaf and dumb. I love you all the more for that."

most hysterical. For an instant he was dumfounded and incredulous. "Why—why didn't you talk, then?" he stammered, with a foolish laugh.

"I answered," she answered, with confusion. "At first out of mischief. I think I knew you thought me a mute and it amused me. Afterwards I hadn't the courage, and I tried to keep you away."

A general movement of the guests towards the refreshment room brought them to their senses. He gravely offered her his arm and they went out together.

At length, when they must part, he whispered: "I shall come to-morrow." He sought her next day with most impetuous wooing. He told her the story of his miserable battle with his pride.

"And you—what will you say to me? Say it with your fingers, darling, for fear the walls may hear."

She spelled a few brief words with hot blushes.

When they were able more calmly discuss matters Rawleigh found the riddle of the situation made plain. Miss Westlander had been only another who was deaf. They were brothers. He must be educated. So, in order to be near him, and to keep pace with him in the only language he could ever know, she had obtained a place as teacher in the institute.

"When we were on the stile together that funny day," she said, "I was not certain whether you knew or could talk or not. So I put you to the test by spelling and using the signs as fast as I could. When you burst out and called me a windmill I knew you supposed I was deaf and dumb. I was half afraid of you, you seemed so odd."

"We shall have one advantage over common people," said Rawleigh, gaily. "We can talk our love on the street corners and upon the highways and to no one will be the wiser."

She smiled at his words. "This is the language of Heaven!"

CLARA DOTY BATES.

THE CZAR'S CAR.

An Army Guards the Railway When He Travels.

When the czar travels in Russia the precautions taken for his safety could not be greater if he were in an enemy's country. A battalion of infantry is detailed for every two miles of distance, and allowing five hundred men as the effective force of each battalion, every spot of ground within a radius of the track is covered by sentinels within easy distance of each other. The czar is suddenly whirled off to the station, accompanied by the chosen twelve of his guard, and without pause or circumstance, swiftly and silently. The czar always travels in a train of five carriages. His carriage is built in a peculiar style.

The interior, while ample for light, are high, so that a person sitting down is invisible from the outside, and the sides of the car are fortified with plates of iron, but strong enough to resist a bullet. There are two sentry boxes in the carriage, one at each end, and each looking out at an opposite side.

On duty in these apartments are sentry in every observation of the interior of the carriage, but at intervals of about two feet, the whole length of the carriage, electric light bulbs are communicating with the guard chambers, as well as with the two carriages, one containing the suite and the other, in the rear, occupied by the guardsmen on duty. So that, wherever the train itself is concerned, the czar could be no more secure in St. Petersburg.

The train speeds on its destination without a halt, except on account of a signal at a distance of less than five miles ahead in a pioneer train, in which the imperial director of railways and the chief engineer of the particular railway on which the czar is traveling, always ride. At a point train whizzes by the reserves along the line rush to arms and guard the sides of the railway, waiting until the imperial train has passed, so that the spectacle is present of continuous lines of sentry in diery for hundreds of miles. Arrived at the end of his journey, the czar is escorted to the quarters intended for the imperial family.

The streets are guarded by special constables, in the attire of citizens. Every property owner has been called upon to supply one or more of these sentry, and to do duty when the sovereign makes his appearance. The constables average one in ten of the crowd that throngs the streets, and being in ordinary dress they can mingle with the people, note what is said, and, perhaps, do something that will obtain them regular employment among the secret police.

With one-tenth the population engaged as sentry upon the remainder, with troops once concentrated to stamp the formidable signs, and his faithful guardsmen dogging every step, the czar goes through the forms of a visit to the most capital of Russian cities, whatever city he may choose to honor. Inter-State Alliance Lesson.
No. 6.—FOR SEPTEMBER.

QUESTION. What is political economy?
ANSWER. It is the science of administering the affairs of government.

Q. What is politics?

A. Webster's unabridged dictionary gives the following definition: "The science of government; that part of ethics which has to do with the regulation and government of a Nation or State, the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity; the defense of its existence and rights against foreign control or conquest, the augmentation of its strength and resources, and the protection of its citizens in their rights, with the preservation and improvement of their morals."

Q. What, then, is the difference between the terms: "political economy," and "politics"?

A. There is but a little, if any. Both have reference to the proper and just administration of the affairs of government. While the science of political economy aims to reach the best methods of government, the common acceptance of the meaning of the word politics seems to include all the methods employed to attain that result. Thus the management of political parties and the means used to obtain party supremacy, although frequently of a very questionable nature, is commonly called politics, although it may not tend to a proper and just administration of government affairs.

Q. What is the duty of the Alliance with regard to questions of political economy?

A. "To labor for the education of the agricultural classes, in the science of economical government, in a strictly non-partisan spirit."

Q. What do we understand by this?

A. That it is the mission of the Alliance to educate its members and others on those political questions that affect their rights as citizens of every capacity.

Q. What are we to understand by the words "in a strictly non-partisan spirit"?

A. That in the education of the masses the creeds, policies and principles of political parties, as such, shall be ignored, and that the groundwork of education be laid upon the eternal principles of justice and right without reference to political parties.

Q. Suppose that, in following this line of teaching, the Republican party is found to antagonize the principles and demands of the Alliance; what is expected of the Republican members of the Alliance?

A. They are expected to exercise their intelligence and patriotism, and to place their votes "where they will do the most good." No true member of the Alliance will vote for a man or a party that antagonizes the principles and demands of the order.

Q. Suppose that both the Democratic and Republican parties are found to oppose the principles and demands of the Alliance; what hope, then, has Alliance of attaining its objects?

A. They have left the recourse of voting for and with some other party or taking independent political action.

Q. But, would this not be a violation of its non-partisan principles?

A. No. They are only enjoined to educate from a non-partisan standpoint; that is without reference to the creed or principles of any party. They leave themselves free to act as they see fit and as necessity demands. They would be an array of fools and cowards, unworthy of the name of freemen, if they tied themselves either expressly or by implication to any political party. It would be worse than folly to make their demands without reserving the right to enforce them. The experiment is being made as to whether either of the existing political parties will concede to our demands. We are not asking promises. We have been fed upon that kind of diet until our bones rattle. We want relief and we want it now. We can get it after a while by ourselves. While we bind no one to vote for any political party, we reserve to ourselves every available means to enforce our demands, even to the taking of independent political action. No man has any greater right to say that our objects can be attained through the Republican and Democratic parties than some other man has to say they can't be. The man who opposes the organization of another party, or taking independent political action, is a bitter partisan himself. Whenever the people are satisfied that relief can not be attained through either of the existing political parties, nothing can prevent them from acting independently. Let the work of education be in accordance with our principles, and not according to the Democratic or Republican faith, and all will be well. The members will act as they please, and if their education is unbiased by partisanship, they will act right and vote right.

Q. Upon what is the science of political economy based?

A. Upon the rights of a man, collectively and individually.

Q. What are the fundamental or natural rights of a man?

A. The right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Q. What do we understand by the right to life?

A. That in a government he not only has a right to protection against being killed by lawless persons, but to procure the necessary things to prolong life and make it comfortable and happy.

Q. What natural elements are the free gift of God to man that are necessary to sustain life and add to his comfort and happiness?

A. Land, water, air and sunlight.

Q. What would be the result if we were deprived of either or all of these for any considerable length of time?

A. We would sicken and die.

Q. Did God intend that all the people should enjoy these gifts, or only a part of them?

A. The earth was made for man, and all that is in it was designed for him.

Q. What then is the object of government?

A. To protect men in their natural rights—the weak against the strong—the good against the encroachments of the bad.

Q. What is the underlying principle upon which title to property is based?

A. Primarily, human necessity; secondarily, what a man earns should be his own. A man is naturally entitled to enough of the natural elements from which, by the application of his labor, to live comfortably. "In the sweat of his face he shall eat his bread." He is entitled to all he earns. "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

Q. Do all men have these rights?

A. They do. The right to the gifts of nature are inherent. No man has a right to abridge them. A government that permits it is not perfect. If one man possesses more property than he needs, and another not as much, the condition is abnormal, and if the poor man is in industries, there is something wrong in the economic system.

Q. How will the government provide against this condition?

A. By the abolition of all class laws, and giving all an equal show in the race of life.

Q. But even under these equal conditions some men would amass vast fortunes, on account of their greater natural shrewdness, while others would not be able to hold their own. How can a government avoid this?

A. The same condition exists in nature. The law of gravitation attracts everything to a common centre. All the water in the world would be in the ocean were it not for a compensating force or law supplied by the wisdom of God. The great lifting power of the sun draws the water into the air, where currents carry it back over the land and redistribute it in the form of rain. Let man learn from nature. As the concentration of water would lead to drought and result in death, so does the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few lead to starvation and death. To provide against this it is the duty of governments to enact a compensating law. A graduated income tax will answer this purpose. Let incomes of $1,000 or less be exempt from tax. Let the second $1,000 be taxed one per cent.; the third $1,000, two per cent.; the fourth $1,000, three per cent.; increasing the tax in like ratio until very large incomes will be taxed out of existence. In addition to this abolishing interest, by the government furnishing money at cost. Let all money be engaged in productive enterprise and in the development of the resources of the country.

Wolfe County F. & L. U.

The Wolfe County Union held its regular session with the Stillwater Lodge in Wolfe county, Ky., on the 25th and 26th days of July, 1891, and some important business was transacted.

H. S. Helton offered the following resolution, which was adopted, viz:

That we favor and endorse the Peoples party movement.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted, viz:

Whereas, farmers and laborers are barely making a living, and all officers of the subordinate and county Unions freely give their services; whereas, it becomes more manifest every day that the enemies of our order are seeking to defeat its purposes by sowing seeds of discord in its ranks, by maligning its leaders to take away their support, and by appeals to the partisan feelings of many of our members who have been heretofore active supporters of one or the other political parties; whereas, all people should be educated upon all questions pertaining to civil government in order to insure, perpetuate or uphold a genuine Republic, therefore be it

1. Resolved, That the salaries of the president and secretary of the Kentucky State Union should be reduced to $25 per month and incidental expenses.

2. Resolved, That we condemn the course taken by the Farmers Home Journal for the personal attack it made on the Hon. S. B. Erwin, ex-president of the F. & L. U. of Kentucky, who has devoted the past fifteen years of his life to the interests of the laboring masses, and who is at present the standard bearer of the Peoples party for Governor of Kentucky.

3. Resolved, That we deem the educational features of the reform movement the most important and vital, and therefore urge the members to subscribe for only such papers as are true exponents of the principles of the F. & L. U.

4. Resolved, That we recommend that the State Union establish a State organ, to be owned by the State Union; further, that said paper be furnished free of charge to each member of the order in good standing.

5. Resolved, That we endorse the action of the National Alliance held at Ocala, Fla., Dec., 1890.

6. Resolved, That we have the fullest confidence in all of our national leaders, and promise them our unwavering support in all their efforts in behalf of the great reform movement of this nation.
